Nurture Your Sons:

Heart of America Council

Children grow so fast that sometimes we say they grow like weeds. Weeds are plants that grow without any attention from us and become pests. Our valued plants are those that we pay attention to and nurture.

Trees in a forest with good soil and weather will grow to be strong and straight and tall. That same tree grown in a harsh environment with little care will grow to be misshapen and warped, but it will still grow.

Spend time with your kids and nurture them carefully, so that they reach their full potential like strong trees, and not become pests like weeds.
