

"The Flag" (A Patriotic Poem)

By an Unknown Author

In the breeze it flutters high,
A symbol of our dreams that fly,
Stitched in colors bold and bright,
It stands for freedom, hope, and light.

Through battles fought and victories won,
It waves for all, for everyone,
A tapestry of stories told,
Of courage, sacrifice, and bold.

So let it wave, let it be seen,
A beacon bright, a nation's dream,
For in its folds, our hearts unite,
In peace, in love, in shared delight.

This collection of quotes and the poem reflects the deep emotional connection people have with flags, celebrating their significance as symbols of unity and patriotism. Whether through words or art, flags continue to inspire and evoke pride in nations and communities alike.
